To whom it may concern

On the 1st of January 2013, the first senior student moved into her room. Clearly excited and with great joy of a new res, the opportunity to be close to campus as a final year medical student, the opportunity to live with 8 other students in a pod, developing a close community, making new friends, and, the opportunity to live for the first time in a STAG inspired concept.

STAG had to pull out all the stops to have this student move into her room on the 1st of January. We all know that it was holiday season, but the requirements from the university were clear, that we need to have students placed by 1st of January. STAG produced, and we were able to place students from the 1st of January. Yes, there were challenges with subcontractors, but my experience with STAG as a company, has been impeccable and professional. Stag has gone out of their way to deliver!

Students love the Stag concept. Here are some of the comments of students over the past months: "It is a home with friends". "I love my stay here". "It is quite enjoyable". "Lots of students want to come and live here next year".

STAG concept is convenient, practical and fun for them. For medical and allied health students, isolation can be a problem with such a hectic program, however, students have found the STAG concept refreshing, different, and a new experience for student communities. Stellenbosch University, with all their stakeholders (my role being from the student communities environment as Visiting Head) has assisted and collaborated with STAG to develop this new, cost effective, friendly student environment accommodation, beyond just a place to stay! It is build to create living communities!

I can highly recommend STAG. I have enjoyed working with their staff in the past few months. I believe STAG provides more than just a professional service in new construction methods, I also have found that STAG is serious as a company to assist our dire need for student housing. To assist in solving our student housing problem in South Africa, but with a purpose, an educational purpose.

THANK YOU STAG!
